

Editorial

Welcome to Innovation in Psychology. Innovation in Psychology is a publication of the University of Guelph-Humber, Psychology program. Innovation in Psychology is an open access, peer-reviewed undergraduate journal that publishes empirical and theoretical papers on all aspects of psychology. It allows undergraduate psychology students from both within and outside of the University of Guelph-Humber the opportunity to submit academic research studies to be published. The journal assists in introducing students to the publishing and peer - review process of the research cycle and disseminates knowledge to the academic community.

Through this enterprise, we intend to help young scholars pursue academic research and writing that may prepare them for their future graduate endeavors.

On behalf of our editorial team, I would like to extend our gratitude to the University of Guelph-Humber and the contributing authors to this inaugural issue. We hope that this issue will generate more interest in future undergraduate research.

Best wishes,

Masood Zangeneh, Ph.D.
